

Stockperson Vacancy – January 2024

An exciting opportunity has arisen for a Stockperson to join the team at Fearn Farm from January 2024.

Fearn Farm is in the Scottish Highlands and is owned and run by the Scott Family who have, over various generations, developed the farming business which now extends to 1100ha. This well-developed breeding and finishing farming business specialises in high quality beef and sheep genetics which are sold to customers all over the UK.

A significant proportion of the role will be stock-based – switching between the cattle and sheep enterprises according to seasonal demand.

Alongside the stockwork segment of the role, the candidate may join the arable team to assist at peak times.

This role will give you the opportunity to be supported in a team environment and also work autonomously.

This role would suit someone who either wishes to gain experience elsewhere before returning home to farm or someone who doesn't have a farming background and is passionate about the industry.

We're looking for someone dynamic and pro-active – who'll bring fresh ideas and enthusiasm to complement our young team.

Additionally, the following personal attributes would be highly beneficial for candidates:

- A first-class attitude to health and safety and animal welfare
- A good level of stockmanship
- A great work ethic and keenness to learn
- 1-2 well-trained working dogs would be highly beneficial
- Opportunities to progress within the team are always considered at Fearn

This is a full-time, permanent role, beginning January 2024. Shared accommodation provided. An attractive salary will be offered depending on experience.

To apply, please email a CV and short document detailing 5 bullet points of 'what do you want to get from the job?' and 5 bullet points of 'what makes you right for the job?'.
